Join us for the 1ST DCU Quarterly Symposium on Capital Markets and Fintech

IC4 in conjunction with DCU Business School (DCUBS) would like to invite you to the 1st DCU Quarterly Symposium on Capital Markets and Fintech taking place on the 28th of February 2017 in DCU Alpha.

THE PROGRAMME

The financial services industry is going through a period of significant transformation that is creating valuable opportunities and significant challenges.

DCU Business School has recently joined the European Capital Markets Cooperative Research Centre, a foundation to promote and facilitate capital markets research amongst research institutions and industry, and has launched the Finance Innovation Group in order to support the Irish financial services industry.

This first symposium organised by the Finance Innovation Group at DCU will focus the opportunities and challenges presented by the Capital Markets Union and fintech. The Capital Markets Union is a European Commission plan to mobilise capital in Europe to support industry and infrastructure projects that need it to expand and create jobs. Fintech is a dynamic segment at the intersection of the financial services and technology sectors. Innovations in cloud and mobile computing, social business, and big data analytics are transforming the financial services sector providing new opportunities for value creation. This first symposium will explore the future of banking, high frequency trading, cybersecurity and legal considerations for fintech, and the opportunities and challenges for cloud adoption in the financial services sector.

THE ATTENDEES

The 1ST DCU Quarterly Symposium on Capital Markets and Fintech will bring together over 100 stakeholders operating in the financial services and technology sectors including industry, regulators, and academics.
